

Norway's Struggle

EDITOR GAZETTE:—Having seen various articles regarding the political affairs in Norway appear in the Honolulu papers of late, I would like to contribute towards giving to you and your readers a better insight into the state of things by sending you a translation of the "Edictum," a manifesto issued by King Oscar after the sentence had been passed on his Prime Minister by the Supreme Court of the realm and hereby give you the subjoined translation:

"What my predecessors on the throne of the Kingdom of Norway have declared, subsequent to the decision of the court of the realm in 1827 and 1816, I now most positively reiterate. No decision of the Supreme Court can be admitted by me as a decisive interpretation of the Constitutional law nor involve any for me or my successors in the slightest degree binding precedent. I then declare that I shall not consider myself on any point or in any respect restricted by the decision just pronounced, on my right to rule the empire in future as I wish with all the authority justly due the King according to the Constitution.

As regards the important matter in question in the first point of the decision—the admission of the Ministers into the Legislature—I consider it especially necessary to assert that the decision of the Supreme Court cannot abrogate or change the hitherto accepted constitutional arrangement, according to which no amendment in the Constitution can be valid without the sanction of the King.

On my accession to the throne I swore to the Constitution as it had been understood by a practice of many years and was explained and confirmed by the most competent men as well as the Legislature itself, but I did not promise and was by my oath prevented from promising implicit submission to every alteration in the Constitution effected by a majority in the Legislature, this would be nothing less than abandoning the Constitutional position accorded to royalty by the Constitution itself, and which therefore the King of Norway is called upon to maintain and defend.

The duties incumbent on the King of the Union moreover demand with imperative necessity that I in every respect maintain that executive power which only can confirm the Union existing between the empires. Such a task has been imposed upon the King of the Union by the Constitution and mutual convention, and must be secured him by the inner necessity of the thing.

Both Kingdoms are equally privileged members of the Union contracted by mutual free will and in legal form, but either of the Kingdoms are also bound by this very Union and the King as their common representative has not only the right but also the duty to watch that this convention is strictly kept. I therefore most positively reject every party attack upon any of the guarantees of the Union, and one of the most important among these guarantees lies in the King's unrestricted right of sanctioning or vetoing amendments of the Constitution, in one Kingdom as in the other.

Every society must be built upon obedience to the laws, respect for right and justice, and for the constitution as it has been established, interpreted and practiced in the past. This great principle cannot be violated without the most serious consequences for the honor and welfare of the nation. To give the contents of a sentence as the one just passed upon the Premier Minister Selmer my sanction would be making myself and the Norwegian nation responsible for it and its consequences to the country and the union. It is evident, that the order of judicial proceedings and the composition of the court has been encroached upon in a manner which is contrary to the principles of an impartial administration of justice.

Profound is my grief that such judicial practice and decision could occur in our country. Still I find that I perform my duty and promote the welfare of the country better in the present case by letting my Minister Selmer resign. Besides he has himself humbly expressed a wish to retire from the council.

I then decide "Minister of State Christian August Selmer resigns from his office." I express my regrets and warm appreciation of his discharge of his official duties and faithful service to the Kingdom and myself.

LOVE M. WESTERSEN.
(Which all means that King Oscar had to eat the leaf, but did not enjoy the meal. In effect he says, I ought not to remove my Minister but as you wish it I will. The will of the people was too much for the crown and it had to yield and throw up a little dust while doing it.—Ed.)
